

Employability Quotient

A term used by University Career Services to describe your progress in attaining the number of UCS recommended developmental experiences in various skill categories.

For the past several years, employers have stated that many college students and graduates do not have key personal qualities/skills that they seek. This can result in:

fewer interviews
lack of job offers, and if hired, possible early termination.

We don't want this to happen to you!

As a Georgia State University student, you have access to ePortfolio (<http://www.gsu.edu/career/eportfolio.html>), an online tool that allows you to track and chart your progress in 9 critical skill areas. Success in these skill areas increases your chances of getting hired by preparing you to:

meet employer needs
develop a strong résumé present your strengths effectively in an interview, and demonstrate your value on the job

So take your EQ to the limit. Get started today.
